Status of Residence & Common Questions

What is a “status of residence”?

“Status of residence” (also “residence status”, “visa status”, and “immigration status”) refers to the categorization of what activities someone is permitted to undertake as a foreigner in Japan. For example, (Foreign) Student, Technical Intern Training, Dependent, etc. (Reference: Ministry of Foreign Affairs of Japan website)

Common Questions from Foreign Residents

(Reference: CLAIR, “Living in Japan: Frequently Asked Questions (Japanese)”)

Part-Time Work

“My spouse is here as an (foreign) student, so I am here as a ‘dependent’.
I’d like to do some part-time work, is this possible?”

For those whose status of residence is “Dependent”, you must first apply for “Permission to engage in activities other than (those) permitted under the status of residence” before you are eligible to engage in part-time work in Japan. Once you receive permission, you may work part-time for up to 28 hours per week. The application can be submitted online.

Divorce

“My husband is Japanese, and we have one year-old child who holds Japanese citizenship.
My husband has said he wants a divorce, and I want a divorce too.
If we get divorced, will I have to go back to my country?”

If your residence status is “Spouse of a Japanese national”, getting a divorce will make you ineligible to renew this status of residence, meaning you will need to return to your country.
However, in your case, because you have a child with Japanese nationality, if you can obtain custody of the child after the divorce, it may be possible for you to renew a different Status of Residence as a parent.

If you can renew your Status of Residence, you will not need to return to your country.

To obtain custody of your child and renew your residence status, you will need to secure employment and a place to live in order to ensure that you can properly support the child.

Additionally, to prevent your spouse from filing for divorce without your consent, you may file a “Non-acceptance of Divorce Notification” in advance at your local city or town hall/office.

Note: It is important to first consult a specialized agency (such as one listed below) before filing for divorce.

Life Knowledge: Japanese Bicycle Traffic Rules

Make sure to learn Japanese traffic rules so you can ride bicycles in Japan safely!

Wear a helmet.

Ride on the left side of the road.

If you see a footpath with this sign, you may ride your bicycle on it.

However, pedestrians have the right of way, so be sure to ride at a speed that allows you to stop at any time.

If you don't follow traffic rules, there are penalties (such as imprisonment or fines)!

For example, using a smartphone while riding a bicycle can result in up to 6 months of jailtime and/or a fine of up to 100,000 yen. If you cause an accident, the penalty can be up to 1 year of jailtime and/or a fine of up to 300,000 yen. Punishments vary based on the violation.

If you ride a bicycle at night without turning the light on, you may be penalized.

It's important to have bicycle insurance to cover potential compensation costs.

There have been instances where the perpetrator of bicycle accidents has been ordered to pay tens of millions in Japanese yen in damages for causing harm or death to another person.

(Reference: Ministry of Foreign Affairs of Japan website)

What do I do if I get into an accident on my bicycle?

- If someone is injured, call an ambulance on 119.
- Call the police on 110 and report the accident.
- Exchange names and contact information with others involved in the accident.
- If you have bicycle insurance, call your insurance provider.
